POINTS RE LEGAL WAIVER ISSUE

- ◆ To meet the Waiver Order's tariff filing condition, the Bell Companies had to file any payphone line tariffs that had not been reviewed for NST compliance -- not just those rates that the Bell Companies believed needed revision.
 - The Payphone Orders delegated NST compliance review to state commissions, not to the Bell Companies.
 - To comply with the Payphone Orders, the Bell Companies had to file and submit cost support for all their intrastate payphone line rates so that state commissions could review the rates for NST compliance, whether or not the Bell Companies proposed to revise the rates.
 - To meet the Waiver Order's tariff filing condition as well, the Bell Companies had to file and submit cost support for NTS-compliant “intrastate tariffs for payphone services . . . within 45 days . . .” (§ 19) without distinguishing between rates that the Bell Companies did or did not propose to revise.
 - The Bureau rejected “alternatives to granting a waiver” (§ 21) that would defer the entire Section 276 reclassification for 90 days and compel LECs to refile all their intrastate payphone service tariffs. But it did condition the waiver on refiling of any rate that had not yet been reviewed for NST compliance.
 - It would have been irrational for the Bureau to reward the Bell Companies for noncompliance by waiving the required NST review of existing payphone line rates.
 - After the Waiver Order was issued, most Bell Companies did file cost support for existing payphone line rates, indicating that they too construed the order to require such filings.
- ◆ The Waiver Order's refund condition likewise applied to all the yet-to-be-reviewed payphone line rates -- not just those rates that the Bell Companies believed needed revision
 - The Waiver Order's refund requirement clearly applied to all the rates submitted for state NTS review.
 - Section 276(a), as interpreted by the Payphone Orders, required NST compliance by 4/15/97.
 - Without refunds, the Bureau's limited 45-day waiver of this requirement would be unlimited, continuing for however many years it took to bring the Bell Companies' rates into NTS compliance.

- The Common Carrier Bureau had no authority to waive the statutory requirement without providing for refunds to make compliance retroactive to 4/15/97.

◆ Waiver refund period ended when NST-compliant rates became effective

- The Waiver Order expressly required refunds, “once the new intrastate tariffs are effective,” where NST-compliant rates “when effective, are lower than the existing rates.”
- The delay in NST compliance could be “mitigated” as the Commission intended only by refunding the difference between existing payphone line rates and NST-compliant rates – not the difference between existing payphone line rates and non-compliant rates proposed by the Bell companies.
- If refunds applied only to Bell-proposed non-compliant rates, the Bureau’s limited 45-day waiver of the NTS requirement would be unlimited, continuing for however many years it took to bring the Bell Companies’ rates into NTS compliance.

◆ As the 9th Circuit stated in Davel, “[a]s the current dilemma may not have been contemplated at the outset by the agency, interpreting the Waiver Order requires consideration of policy considerations similar to those that gave rise to the FCC’s [Payphone Orders].” 2006 U.S. App. Lexis 21098, *31.
